WHAT IS CRIME PREVENTION THROUGH ENVIRONMENTAL DESIGN?

Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED), is a way to make our communities more welcoming by keeping safety in mind when thinking about the places and spaces you share with your neighbors.

CPTED is about making simple changes to our surroundings to encourage safety and connection among neighbors. We can use this strategy to reduce crime and violence and bring neighbors together.

DOES CPTED REDUCE CRIME AND VIOLENCE?

There are many examples from around the country that show how using CPTED has reduced crime and helped residents feel safer while creating a community environment where people from different backgrounds feel welcome and safe.

Neighborhoods across the U.S. have had dramatic reductions in drug sales, burglaries and general crime by 15-100 % using CPTED strategies.

WHO IS THIS TOOLKIT FOR?

This toolkit is for neighborhoods and residents who want to create safer places to live and work. This toolkit explains CPTED and provides hands-on ways residents can work together to help address problem areas in their neighborhoods to make them safer.
Community members can do a CPTED assessment of their neighborhood by looking at the following CPTED principles:

WHAT ARE CPTED PRINCIPLES?

CAN I SEE OTHERS? CAN OTHERS SEE ME?

People feel safe in areas where it is easy to see or be seen by others, like a block where neighbors use their front yards and porches. Issues like over-grown shrubs, bad lighting, or high walls or privacy fences make it difficult to see and discourage residents from enjoying their neighborhood, which can create opportunities for unsafe or violent behavior.

DO I KNOW WHERE TO GO?

People feel more secure when they know how to get around their neighborhood and find where to go. Things like clearly marked entrances and exits or signs that guide visitors to their destinations make it easier to enjoy public spaces and help everyone understand what those spaces are used for.

WHAT IS THIS SPACE FOR?

A space that is being used for what it is supposed to be used for feels safer. Some examples are when public parks and playgrounds feel safe and welcoming for kids and families and marking the end of a public space and the beginning of private property.
People are less likely to engage in unsafe behavior in places where it is clear that someone cares about the space. Things like mowed lawns, cleaning up graffiti as soon as it happens, and securing vacant buildings make it clear that residents care about their neighborhood and are paying attention to what happens there.

CPTED ideas are more than physical changes; they include social programs that encourage connection among neighbors. A connected community values diversity, shares a sense of belonging, and works to develop positive relationships among people from different backgrounds.

A strong sense of community can encourage positive outlooks and behaviors. This is created when residents set up and participate in festivals, cultural events, neighborhood cleanups, youth groups, etc.

SOLUTIONS:

For more information on neighborhood groups and NBRs, see pages 20 and 21 for contact information

Once you're connected with your neighborhood group or NBR, attend or host events at local parks, community centers, or block parties.

Participate in clean ups or help an elderly neighbor with yard work. Not only does this beautify your neighborhood, but you get to know each other and start to watch out for each other!

A great and easy way to increase community connection and perception of safety is to participate in positive behaviors like going on walks, using the parks near your home, and sitting on your porch!
